Introduction

If you're puzzled about how you'll pay for your higher education, you're not alone. Whether you're planning to go to college, technical college, or private trade school, you must consider what your education will cost and the sources of student aid that can help you pay your expenses. Because financial aid is available, it's important that you don't rule out a school based on cost alone.

Making the transition to higher education takes planning. The Alabama Student Loan Program—KHEAA and AASFAA hope this brochure helps make the planning easier by providing some basic information about student financial aid.

Financial Aid Questions and Answers

Q: What are the types of financial aid?

A: Several types are listed below.

Grants: Gift assistance that normally doesn't have to be repaid (if you fail to enroll, withdraw or change your enrollment status, you may be required to return a percentage of the money). Grant awards are based on financial need.

Scholarships: Gift assistance based on skill, ability talent or achievement. These are merit-based and do not have to be repaid.

Waivers: An arrangement offered by some schools to cancel specific costs for students who meet certain qualifications. For instance, if one of your parents was a firefighter killed or disabled in the line of duty in Alabama, some schools would grant you a waiver.

Conversion scholarships/loans: Scholarships which require the recipient to provide certain services for prescribed periods of time or pay back the money with interest.

Work-study: Part-time employment that lets students earn money toward a college education by working either on or off campus.

Loans: Money borrowed to cover the cost of education which must be repaid with interest.

Military benefits: Financial aid available to individuals (or to their dependents) who have performed military service or are preparing to enter the U.S. Armed Forces.

Prepaid tuition: Contract purchased to guarantee fully paid undergraduate tuition for a fixed number of credit hours at a participating college.

Q: Who provides financial aid?

A: Schools, state and federal governments, and private lenders and organizations provide financial aid. However, you and your family have the primary responsibility for meeting educational expenses to the best of your ability.

Q: How is financial aid awarded?

A: It's awarded on the basis of financial need (need-based) or on the basis of academic achievement, athletic ability, or other talents or abilities (merit-based). Most financial aid is need-based but is often awarded in combination with merit-based awards.

Q: How do I apply?

A: The standard application for most state and federal financial aid programs is the Free Application for Federal Student Aid (FAFSA). You can file your FAFSA online at www.fafsa.ed.gov. Information that you provide on the FAFSA will be used to determine how much your family is expected to pay toward the cost of your higher education.

You should check with the school you plan to attend to find out whether additional application forms are needed. For example, to receive a Federal Stafford Loan or Federal PLUS Loan, a separate application must be filed in addition to the FAFSA.

Q: When do I apply?

A: Early! File your FAFSA as soon as possible after January 1 of your senior year in high school, as soon as your family has its tax preparation data. Students who file early have the best chance of receiving financial aid for which they're eligible. Deadlines for financial aid programs vary. If you don't know the deadline, check with the financial aid office, your high school counselor or the contact for program information.

Q: What does higher education cost?

A: Many institutions of higher education are located throughout Alabama. Costs for a school year range from $10,333 to $30,222 for a four-year school and from $5,660 to $20,805 for a two-year school. Keep in mind that these estimated costs include tuition/fees, room/board, books/supplies, transportation, and personal/miscellaneous expenses.

Q: Where can I get more information about financial aid?

A: A chart of the major financial aid programs for Alabama students can be found on the inside of this brochure. Your guidance counselor or the financial aid officer of a school you're interested in attending can provide more detailed information about these and other financial aid programs. Check online for financial aid information at www.alstudentaid.com, the website of the Alabama Student Loan Program-KHEAA, and www.alabamamentor.org.
